CULTURAL INSIGHT

Did You Know?

January 2 is a sort of second New Year's Day in South Africa that's linked to the country's history of slavery. Communities with deep roots in the slave culture often hold large celebrations on the holiday as it was traditionally the only day each year that seventeenth century slaves were allowed to take off and rest. The January 2 holiday is called Tweede Nuwejaar, or "Second New Year," and it is essentially a modern twist on the parties the slaves had in the Cape area at the beginning of every new year.

2 Januarie is 'n soort van tweede Nuwejaarsdag in Suid Afrika, gekoppel aan die geskiedenis van slawerny in die land. Gemeenskappe met diep wortels in die slawe kultuur hou dikwels groot feesvieringe op hierdie vakansie dag omdat dit tradisioneel die enigste dag van die jaar was wat 17de eeuse slawe toegelaat was om vry te neem en uit te rus. Die vakansie dag op 2 Januarie is bekend as Tweede Nuwejaar, of "Tweede Nuwe Jaar," en dit is eintlik 'n moderne draai op die partytjies wat die slawe gehou het in die Kaap aan die begin van elke nuwe jaar.
